SUPPORT

John Hinds
1980 - 2015

In memory of

John Hinds and Marco Simoncelli, two names that will never be forgotten. Two men who dedicated their lives to helping others and pursuing their passions. Their premature deaths, which occurred during their work, left an immeasurable void in the hearts of their friends, family, and the communities that have known them.

John Hinds, known as the "Flying Doctor," was an Irish physician who ran behind the motorcycles during races to be ready to intervene in case of accidents. His passion was to save the lives of struggling riders. He was a man who was not afraid to take risks to save someone. However, fate had it that on July 4, 2015, during a race in Dublin, John lost his life in a tragic accident. His death left an enormous void in the hearts of those who knew him.

Marco Simoncelli, known to all as "Sic," was a rider with a unique talent and an uncontrollable passion for his motorcycle. He started racing at a young age and reached international success. However, on October 23, 2011, during a race in Malaysia, Marco lost control of his bike and died instantly. The news of his death shook the world of motorcycle racing and the entire sports world in general.

These two men lost their lives doing what they loved most: helping others and riding a motorcycle. That is why our HITTER MAJOR TRAUMA MANAGEMENT course is dedicated to them. We want to honor their memory through the training of new doctors, nurses, and paramedics. We want to instill the passion and love for trauma care, following the example that Marco Simoncelli had for his sport.

John Hinds and Marco Simoncelli, two lives that met only through the tragic coincidence of death, but continue to inspire millions of people around the world. Thanks to them, our HITTER MAJOR TRAUMA MANAGEMENT course is dedicated not only to training doctors, nurses and paramedics, but also to their memory, dreams, and passion for their work.
